First International ECSA Conference

Citizen Science – Innovation in Open Science, Society and Policy

19–21 May 2016 | Berlin, Kulturbrauerei

The European Citizen Science Association invites you to the First International ECSA Conference in Berlin, Germany, 19–21 May 2016. We will have three days of talks, interactive sessions and panels to discuss and network with Citizen Scientist enthusiasts, practitioners, academic researchers, policy makers, science funders, non-governmental organisations, interested citizens and other stakeholders. The conference focuses on demonstrating and further exploring the innovation potential of Citizen Science for science, society and policy and its role within open science and innovation. Over the three days you will have the possibility to showcase how both new and traditional ways of citizens working with scientist can enable transformative potential to enhance science-policy and social impact, scientific advancement, scientific literacy and empowerment.

Save the date and be part of the First International ECSA Conference in Berlin.

The call for session is now open for ECSA members. The open call for abstracts will be open in January 2016. Subscribe now on the conference website and you will be sure to get all conference information.
